Editor's Note

As we bid farewell to the well-known online classes and start a new journey, you know what that encompasses? A new issue, a new us, and a new you. These few months have been a complete whirlwind of challenges, achievements, goals, and purposes. No matter the trials and tribulations that were thrown at us, those hurdles were handled with grace and poise. As the school has been in full swing with academics and extra-curriculars at an utmost high, the trumpet is back yet again to showcase what Genesians are really all about. As all of us strive to achieve our greatest targets, the fresh pages of Trumpet will be alongwith you, writing down your triumphs. Highlighting the talents of this institution has been a matter of utmost joy and inspiration for us and we look forward to having a plethora of activities moving forward. We really hope this issue acts as a beacon of nostalgia and hope that keeps each and everyone of you on your toes to keep striving with faith and confidence. And never forget, always follow your heart.

Freedom of Speech

By: Zia Krishnan XIA

What is freedom of speech?

Freedom of speech is a principle that supports the freedom of an individual or a community to articulate their opinions and ideas without fear of retaliation, censorship or legal sanction.

It is Article 19 (1) (a) of the constitution of India that guarantees freedom of speech to all its citizens. This freedom is subject to exceptions under Article 19 (2).

Article 19(2) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights grants everyone the right to freedom of speech and expression. India has also ratified these international declarations and hence holds high regard for this essential freedom of its citizens.

Hate speech poses a challenge to the right to freedom of speech and expression. In contemporary times, it is often used as a tool to gain popularity. It manifests itself into a form that creates divisions in society by attempting to belittle specific groups of people based on their religion, culture, ethnicity, race, gender, sexual orientation, disability, language, occupation, ideology, appearance, etc. It runs contrary to the objective of the fundamental right to free speech and expression which is to liberate people from all strata of society.

However, certain actions of our current government go against the right to freedom of speech. Attacks on press freedom, such as locking up journalists, raiding their homes, closing down printing presses, and preventing reporters from doing their jobs, have been shown to have demonstrable negative consequences on economic growth.

Unsettling news for India's media and freedom of speech is that 154 journalists were imprisoned, arrested, or interrogated between 2010 and 2020, with 40% of these cases being recorded in just 2020. Geeta Seshu, an independent journalist, conducted research for the Free Speech Collective titled "Behind Bars: Arrest and Detention of Journalists in India 2010-20" that examines the ten years of summons, detention, arrests, questioning, and show-cause orders issued to writers..

Presently, three journalists are in custody for offences involving the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, with one of them having been sentenced to life imprisonment.

India has been performing worse on indices that evaluate the country's press freedom and freedom of expression in this country.

“The arrest of journalist Mohammad Zubair marks another low for press freedom in India, where the government has created a hostile and unsafe environment for members of the press reporting on sectarian issues,” said Steven Butler, CPJ’s Asia program coordinator, in Washington, D.C.

The Prime Minister of India talks about the horrors of Emergency while he has unleashed one in India. Journalist Zubair who routinely busted fake news, exposed the hate machinery in India has just been arrested. The country is punishing those who reported, documented the decline. All of the difficulties that the Indian journalists faced demonstrate the lack of our rights to free speech as citizens, which we must fight to protect because it is our natural right to voice our opinions in an unabashed manner without fear of retaliation or other negative consequences.

BOOK REVIEW

This book is a continuation from the events of 'A Good Girl's Guide to Murder'. Good Girl, Bad Blood is much darker than its predecessor. In this book we get to see Pip back in action with help from Ravi. If it's possible I think this book is even crazier than the first. The author also takes this time to examine the weaknesses in our current law and order systems, as they aren't taking Jamie's missing status seriously, and the rape trial of Max Hastings follows a lot of the same 'he said, she said' injustices we see in real life. This book made me laugh out loud several times which I never expected from any murder mystery before and had me gasping at every plot twist. The mystery had so many unexpected twists and turns and then all the puzzle pieces fit together perfectly at the end. The ending was intense but also completely wrecked me. The final scene was bittersweet.

Synopsis: With the help of Ravi Singh, Pip released a popular podcast about the Andie Bell case but with one exception: to never solve a case again. On the night of the sixth anniversary of Andie Bell and Sal Singh's death someone went missing: Jamie Reynolds. When Jamie's brother Connor and mom come to Pip saying the police won't help she has to break her vow. But she's worried that it may be too late.. what if she's putting everyone she loves at risk for nothing.

THE KNOWLEDGE CONCLAVE DEBATE

This literary event happened within our walls, Genesis Global School. It was at 9 am, and concluded at 2:30 pm with winners' announcements, on 10th August. Even though it was online, Genesis did not fail to impress the candidates. Even though there were no winning teams from the home team, there were several learners. This literary event proved that the young generation is not only critical and international-minded, but they are also effective communicators who know what and how to present their point.

This event had two parts, under which there was debate, which was further divided into preliminary, SemiFinal and finals. There was also Creative writing that proved how our future is so creative and unafraid to share their thoughts. The rolling trophy was earned by Dhirubhai Ambani School Mumbai, and Genesis Global School was declared a runner-up. Avishi Chugh from All Saint's College bagged the trophy of the best showcased "Creative writing" Our students who were participants and chairs of debate represented themselves with utmost elan, making the school proud.

OUR JOB IS NOT TO RAISE OUR OUR JOB IS TO RAISE KIDS WHO WILL

A non-profit coalition Apna Ghar School has been using economic materials to carefully carry out educational programmes for kids.

Together with CCI (childcare institutions), they have been covering the curriculum that kids should have studied in school and providing all-around assistance in other areas. This descriptor is often used synonymous with poor. The pupils were escorted by Ms. Shereen, (the houseparent for the boys' hostel), Ms. Cynthia, (the houseparent for the girls' hostel), and Ms. Jyotsana Batra (Head Social Service Counsellor).

KIDS TO BE CRUEL AND HEARTLESS END THE WORLD'S CRUELTY

The students were enrolled there along with donations of garments, stationery items, and publications. They engaged in games, musicals, questionnaires, and giveaways of chips, candy, and soft drinks with the kids, and you could have seen the ecstasy in their eyes. We enjoyed the time to communicate with Ms. Shikha to discover more about the procedure. She oversees two schools in Noida. She simultaneously educates in both underprivileged schools. Poverty is not being without money but about being without hope. And if you make the world a better place for kids, you make it better for everyone.

For the year of 2022-23, I took part in this elections for the first and last time running for the position for head boy. Though I lost, it was an experience to remember. Firstly, the speeches given at the CPA were a new high for me. The nervousness before going on stage but the relief and confidence after getting off is something you cannot replicate. But the story didn't end there. The next step was to propagate that speech through a wider audience and campaign. It gave me an opportunity to interact with my juniors and understand what they wanted from the school. Hence, though I lost, I feel like I learned a lot not only about myself but also the student body of the school.

Soham Sharda

Campaigning for the school elections was a novel experience for me- and quite a unique one! it was an out of the box experience which expanded my comfort zone and confidence. I learned how to start conversations with random people; and how to persuade someone. i also learned how to make alliances and manage different situations- which led me to small scale political exposure and polished a part of my public speaking skills. all in all, campaigning was a fresh and enriching experience for me!

Rivaan Rastogi

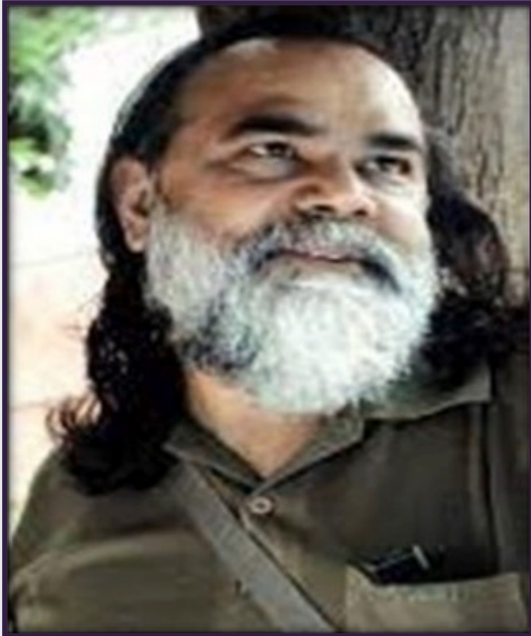

Leaders don't force people to follow, they invite them on a journey". My journey so far from deciding to run for the council, till now, penning down how I feel is truly euphoric. The campaigning videos, the canvassing, the voting and then the result day! It has been a thrilling ride of its own kind. The satisfaction I received on seeing my enthusiastic companions as they cheered for me, is unparalleled! It is an opportunity for me to prove my worth to my school and keep the promises I made to my fellow students and work cooperatively as a team with my council. Looking forward to working together towards our common goal, "The Best Version of Our School".

Ketav singh

Initially, I didn't campaign before the election speeches. During the speech, I tore the paper and improvised, for being a genuine, original person and how the script and structure is the opposite for the freedom of speech and self-representation that I stood for in the first place. One thing led to another, I am now cultural secretary for Genesis Global School and willing to fulfil my duty with honesty.
